DESCRIPTION

Welcoming neurodiversity means being inclusive of people who view, understand and think about the world differently. This training can help to create a more open and welcoming environment, with the right support available for neurodivergent employees and teams. Training content includes defining neurodiversity, disclosure in the workplace, disability etiquette, accommodations and support, leveraging individual strengths, and implementing accessible communication avenues such as providing effective feedback, and establishing email, chat and meeting norms for a team.

You will leave with a better understanding of creating more inclusive environments in the workplace and a plan to start implementing their learnings.
